Mrs. Laora Fair—D. Fair,
Your deed has won you great renown;
You shot to death a generous heart
For pastime as you went to town.
Him you had wiled and long begulled,
He saw the anare and he retired;
The reliet of a dozen men,
You were not one to be desired.

Mrs. Laura Fair-D. Fair, Mrs. Laura Fair—D. Fair,
Are not strange memories in your head,
Not twice our branching limbs have blown
Since you beheld your victim dead.
O, soft your eyes, your low replies;
A great enchantress you may be,
But there was that in your false heart
Which we had scarcely cared to see.

Mrs. Laura Fair—D. Fair,
There stends a spectre at your wall;
The gulit of blood is at your door,
Though murder's now no orime at air.
You held your course without remorse,
You went for all that he was worth,
And last, when breaking through your coils,
You smote him basely to the earth.

Trust me, Mrs. Lanra Fair.
By you blue heavens above us bent,
All honest hearts who read your notes
Smile at your claimed "abandonment."
Howe'er it be, it seems to me
Your gushing phrases were but snares;
Kind words were meant for corner lots,
And simple faith—in Belcher shares.

I know you. Lady Laura Fair; You pined within stone walls and towers You pined within stone walls and towers
Until set free to your surprise
By those bright jurymen of ours.
In glowing health, with stolen wealth,
Sweet murderer, you can take your ease;
For crime stands clear, and none need fear
When justice plays such pranks as these.

YON MOLTKE'S SNUFF. How Things are Managed in the German Army. The Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph recounts a pleasant story illustrative of Prussian administrative thriftiness. which has just gone the round of the French which has just gone the round of the French and German papers:

According to the narrator—the correspondent of a well known Belgian journal—Count von Moltke, temporarily resident at Versailles during the winter of 1870-71, one day ran short of sniff, and falling to find any "sneeshin" of the brand he especially affects in the local bureaux de tabac, instructed one of his subordinates at the War Office in Berlin to forward to him a packet of his "own peculiar" rappee without delay. The snuff was bought, paid for and sent on to Versailles with military prompticude, and was duly charged to the and sent on to Versalles with military promptitude, and was duly charged to the account of the nation. When, peace having been concluded, the time came for examining the books of all the different departments that had been spending money with horrible prodigality for nearly three-quarters of a year—when the indemnity began to arop in by small instalments of £20,000,000 a plece or so, which were at once appropriated to the defrayal of the actual war expenses—one of the officials intrusted with the revision of all the petty cash transactions of the war office, came one day upon the following startling and nochnichtagecosenes item: "For one pound of extra fine, with-of-Tonquin-bean-ling and nochnichtdagenesenes item.

pound of extra fine, with of Tonquin-beanperfume-highly-impregnated, snuff, by his Excellency the Count von Moltke commanded perfume-highly-impregnated, anuff, by his Excellency the Count von Möltke commanded, three thalers seven and a halt silbergroechen." The rigid consolence of the accountant did not allow of his "passing" this irregular, unprecedented item; so he made a memorandum of the entry, and referred it up to his immediate official superior, with an explanatory essay, learned, parenthetical and exhaustive, going a good deal into the origins of things, and logically demonstrating that sauff could not be held to be a material or munitien of war—ergo, that outlays incurred for its purchased could not in equity be saddled upon the national exchequer, or defrayed from the incoming property of the State purchased by the lives of Germany's sons—and so forth. The demurrer thus raised was submitted by one authority to another, enriched with annotations and "opinions," the official manipulation of the question lasting some elxteen months. Essentially the crown lawyers having considered the whole case, and pronounced the snin claim to be one that the State could not admit, Von Meitke was officially addressed upon the subject and requested, with peremptory politeness, to pay for his snunf—a demand with which he at once compiled. There is nothing grossly improbable in this story, which has elicited a good dear of unfamiliar moralizing from some of the most light-hearted French newspapers claim to be one that the State could not admit, Yon Meltke was officially addressed upon the subject and requested, with peremptory politeness, to pay for his annii—a demand with which he at once compiled. There is nothing grossly improbable in this story, which has elicited a good deal of uniamiliar moralizing from some of the most light-hearted freach newspapers of the day, and has been gloated over with intense enjoyment by local journals of the true pressure of the day, and has been gloated over with intense enjoyment by local journals of the true pressure blue tint: Se non è vero, è ben troutti. No country in Europe is so much and atitle; same time so cheaply governed as Prassia. Thrift is as integral a part of the national character as incredulity itself. The administration wastes nothing except time; and government employees are so badly paid that their time represents a much smaller leavancers degrated under this act for the same of the action of the time of the state and county officers and other persons are hereby required to furths to the same of the action time to time, as they may judge that the public interest required. that their time represents a much smaller money value than that of officials in other countries. It is true that there are more of them; perhaps, relatively to the number of the population, than in neighboring States, the population, than in neighboring States, but they are cheap—very cheap—hard-working, and, as a rule, honest. It is in the army administration, par excellence, that the infinitestimal economy of which the above anecded contains so striking an example is shown of its the greatest advantage. The war department has succeeded in attaining a maximum of effectiveness and a minimum of expense. It can and does spend money lavishly when an enemy requires smashing; but, when the day of reckoning comes, woe to the official who may have exceeded the exact limits of his instructions, or neglected to accessific fully for every pfenning of the moneys committed to him for outlay on behalf of the government. No allowances are made, no margin is tolerated. Such an item as "general expenses" is not known in any Prussian bureau in sum is so small that a detail of its expensive in a required. expenditure is not required.

101 QUESTIONS FOR WIVES.

The leaders of the woman's rights reform in The leaders of the woman's rights reform in England are shrewder, more practical and long-sighted than their sisters in America. They are as persistent as the latter that women shall have the right to vote, but with this demand they couple the condition that woman shall have some practical knowledge of the duties which peculiarly belong to her sex. To carry out this idea, mechanics' institutes have been established at various places in England, to which young women, as well as young finen, are admitted. In one of these institutes him Jewsbury lectured to a class of young men, are admitted. In one of these institutes Miss Jewsbury lectured to a class of young women, and recently she gave them the following questions to answer:

1. State the best method of using up bones and scrape of bread and meat.

2. Would you prefer to use an earthen vassel, or a lin or iron pot, to set in your oren or on the hob, to stew any scraps of meat, bones, and bread, that you may have, and state the advantage of keeping such a stock-pot continually going.

nally going.

S. How would you lay out ten shillings in the town if you had a sick husband and four children too young to work; or how, if you children too young to work; or how, if you lived in the country, with a small garden, would you lay out seven shillings and six-peace under the same circumstances?

Suggest a savory and economical dinner for a husband and wife and five children.
 Suggest some savory and economical supper for a husband coming home after a hard dank work.

6. How would you ventilate a sick-room so that a patient would not take a chill?

7. How would you cleanse a room in which a patient had scarlet iever?

8. How would you make bread?

How many young women of the period in How many young women of the period in this country are competent to answer these questions with any degree of intelligence? How many women are able to answer them at all? And yet they lie at the very ioundation of housekeeping. As far as woman's rights are concerned, we should be willing to allow any woman to vote who could answer them satisfactority and could not them into practice. factority and could put them into practice As far as housekeeping is concerned, the wo-man who can answer them will not long be troubled with bad servants.

To CLEAN PAINT.—Use but little water at first; keep it warm and clean by changing it often. A fiannel cloth takes off fly specks often. A flannel cloth takes off hy special better than cotton. Soap will remove the paint; so use but little of it. Cold tea is the best liquid for cleaning varnished paint, window panes and mirrors. A sharp place of soft wood is indispensable for cleaning out orners. A saucer of sitted ashes should always be at hand to clean nuvarnished paint that has become headly smoked; it is better than soan. be at hand to clean unvarnished paint that has become badly smoked; it is better than soap. Never put soap upon glass unless it can be thoroughly rinsed off, which can never be done to window glass. Wash off the specks with warm tex, and rub the panes dry; then make a paste of whiting and water, and put a little in the centre of each pane. Take a dry ploba and rub it all over the glass, and then rub it off with a chamois skin or fiannel, and your windows will shine like crystal. State Notices.
